Morning Assembly

Week 1 — World Kindness Day

How to use this

This is a 5-slide assembly designed for classroom morning meetings, not large halls. Each slide is a talking point for 1-2 minutes. Print slides 2-6 as A4 or display on your classroom screen. Total time: 5-8 minutes including discussion.

Slide 1 — Opening

Good morning! Today is November 13th — World Kindness Day. Around the world, people are thinking about how to be kinder to each other. Let's talk about what that means for us.

Slide 2 — What is kindness?

Kindness is doing something nice for someone else — without being asked, and without expecting anything back. It can be big (helping someone who's hurt) or small (sharing your pencil). Ask the class: what's an example of kindness you've seen this week?

Slide 3 — Kindness everywhere

This week, people around the world are doing acts of kindness. In Australia, children are writing thank-you notes to firefighters. In Canada, a school collected 500 coats for people who need them. In our town, [add local example if you know one — or skip this bit].

Slide 4 — Our class challenge

Your challenge for this week: do ONE act of kindness every day. It could be helping someone tidy up, letting someone go first in line, or checking if someone's okay if they look sad. We'll check in on Friday to hear your stories.

Slide 5 — Question of the day

Here's today's big question to think about: Is kindness always easy? Why or why not? (Hint: sometimes being kind means standing up for someone, which can feel hard — but it's still the right thing to do.)

Notes for teachers

World Kindness Day was created in 1998 and is now celebrated in many countries. If November 13 has passed, adapt to 'this week let's think about kindness'. The class challenge can run any week — kindness doesn't need a special day.
